Detergent and Cleaning Agent Laws Around the World We Make Your Product Marketable

If you intend to market detergents or cleaning agents, you are subject to the provisions of Regulation (EG) Nr. 648/2004 (Detergent Regulation) and individual national laws. The regulations restrict or completely exclude certain ingredients from the market, particularly when they are biologically not degradable, degradable only with difficulty, or are allergens. We are thoroughly familiar with the relevant provisions and can tell you how your products must be labeled and which countries have notification requirements.

CREATE MARKETABILITY and Safeguard Legal Security

Special regulations apply to the contents of detergents and cleaning agents that go beyond the requirements of a safety data sheet. The Detergent Regulation applies throughout the EU, and you must also comply with country-specific regulations and notification requirements. With us on your side, you can meet all legal requirements. And we can provide clarity on international notification and labeling requirements.

EU and Germany

Cleansers and detergents are subject to the Chemicals Law. You must also comply with the provisions of the harmonized, EU-wide Detergent Regulation. But please note that every country also has its own regulations. In Germany, the Detergent and Cleaning Products Act applies. We evaluate the marketability of the ingredients use in detergents and cleaning agents. We also advise you about: Specific requirements for the environmental impact of ingredients; How the products must be labeled; The applicable notification and documentation obligations.

Outside the EU

Those who market detergents and cleaning agents must be familiar with and comply with the legal requirements of each country. In the United States, for example, the Federal Hazardous Substances Act (FHSA) and the Consumer Product Safety Act (CPSC) apply. In most cases, the differences between these laws are minor. Swiss regulations are like those in the EU, with the significant exception that phosphates are prohibited in detergents and cleaning agents. We are familiar with legal requirements around the world and can clarify the preconditions you must meet to have a marketable product.
